

A night of boisterous rapport and whisky galore

PHOTOS CLIVE THAIN & WORDS BEN HAMILTON

Watch our ladies, because as they say, whisky makes you frisky – and as propositions go, invariably risky – although Arne Runge already has his arms full so it's safe to say he's already spoken for. Arne was one of many who attended World Wide Whisky at the international bar Café Globen on Turesensgade last week on Friday for an evening of tastings, lectures and bonhomie.

Clearly enjoying the generous measures are (clockwise from top left) Christophe from France, Benny Hjertaas from Norway, Mike Shorter from the US and Sam Zakrzewski from the UK.

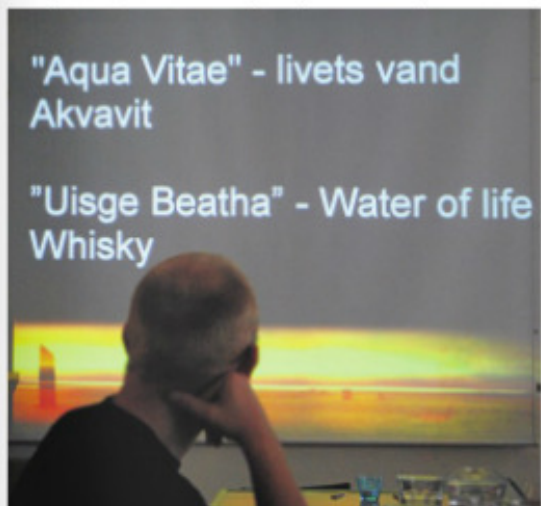

Per Danielsen from Café Globen and Arne Runge caught here during the chorus of Whisky in the jar: "Whack for my daddy'o, there's whisky in this bar," they adlib.

You won't find the answers in a bottom of the glass? Benny Hjertaas begs to disagree

Whisky expert Rom Thomsen elucidated his audience with information on a number of subjects including the secrets of the single cask and the art of distillation. Here he is pictured with loyal friend Elmer T Lee, a bourbon from Kentucky.

"Aqua Vitae" - livets vand
Akvavit

"Uisge Beatha" - Water of life
Whisky

Whisky: the water of life ... or death if you drink a bottle a day

Sam Zakrzewski gets another to go with his chaser

I can't feel my feet

How much if I down this in one?